WE ARE COUSINS

We're connected by blood and also by chance
For, conceived in the lust of our parents' romance,
We are cousins.

Tossed together quite often by our folks' show and tell,
We grew up with each other and we got along well.
We, the cousins.

And while growing older as year follows year,
We still get together to share joy or a tear
For we're cousins.

We have common hist'ry with our links to the past.
In retelling our stories, our fam'ly will last
Through us cousins.

And when one passes to new life that is bless'd
She is never forgotten, she just joins the rest
Of our cousins.

And so if life does grant us some kids of our own,
We make sure they all meet before they are grown
For they're cousins.

Then they, too, can say,
"We're connected by blood and also by chance . . .
We are cousins."

In loving memory of Sarah Keaton Park
Cousin Ted Keaton 02/16/04
